How HR regularises swipes, handles chronic late-marking, abuse patterns and muster-roll sign-off that feeds payroll.

Attendance data becomes pay data every first working day. This SOP keeps that conversion clean: what HR fixes, what HR escalates, and how the muster roll is signed off for payroll without ambiguity.

1. Daily hygiene (getting clean inputs)

- Device-sync status is checked every morning; a failed sync at any site is an ops ticket the same day, not a month-end discovery.
- Joiners, exits, transfers and shift changes are effective-dated in the HRIS before payday, never corrected in the swipe file.
- Regularisation tickets from employees are reviewed and closed within 2 working days; SLA status is reviewed stand-up style each Friday.

2. Regularisation limits

| Pattern | HR action |
|---|---|
| Occasional missed swipe / WFH offline | Approve on manager confirmation (same day) |
| >4 regularisations in a month | Manager call to the employee + documented coaching note |
| Repeated missed swipes at the same window | Check biometric device fault before treating as an employee issue |
| Regularised hours always ≥ swipe gap | Red flag pattern: verify with manager + access-log pulls |

3. Chronic late-coming and absence patterns

Late-mark rules (3 lates = 0.5 CL) are applied mechanically by the HRIS; HR manages the exceptions around them. A conversation — documented in the ticket — comes before an absence is treated as misconduct; expected-use discretion rests with the location HR lead, and the pattern evidence must be shareable with the employee verbatim if challenged.

4. Absence without leave (AWOL) protocol

- Day 3 of unauthorised absence: call + email to registered contacts; record attempts in the ticket.
- Day 5: formal warning via email; exit-process trigger per the handbook.
- Beyond Day 5 without response: abandonment review with the business head before an exit-decision is published.

5. Muster roll sign-off

By the 3rd working day of the month, the location HR signs the monthly muster roll — a named-person endorsement that swipe data, regularisations, LOP and leave records reconcile to the system for that location. The signed sheet is stored with payroll backup; unexplained gaps between sheets and system are resolved before the payroll validation meeting.
