Hybrid Work & Work-From-Home Policy

Which roles work from where, minimum office presence, approval for extended working from another city and client-site rules.

Emids works hybrid: most roles need regular office presence, some are location-flexible, and client engagements follow the client's rules. This policy explains how the three models work and how to request flexibility beyond standard practice.

1. Work models at a glance

Model	Set by	Typical presence
On-site	Role (infrastructure, data rooms, hardware labs)	4–5 days per week
Hybrid	Manager approved roster	2–3 days per week, incl. team anchor days
Remote-flex	Delivery / business unit head	1 day per month unless agreed

2. Team anchor days

Each team chooses 1–2 anchor days when everyone in that team is expected on-site — for collaboration, ceremonies and mentoring. Rosters are shared monthly; exceptions need your manager's OK before skipping.

3. Requesting extended work-from-home

For personal reasons, an agreed temporary WFH stretch beyond your roster uses a temporary WFH request: raise an HR ticket with dates and a work-continuation note from your manager. Stretches of up to 15 working days ride on manager approval alone; beyond that, HR and business-head approvals apply. Chronic health needs are handled as reasonable accommodations instead.

4. Working from another city or country

- India: up to 4 weeks per financial year with manager + HR approval; longer stretches are relocation decisions under the transfer policy.
- Outside India: needs HR, immigration and client-approval sign-off before travel; income tax, payroll and visa implications are reviewed case by case.
- Client-site rules always trump this policy when you are deputed there.

5. Working-day expectations wherever you work

- Be reachable within a reasonable response time during your declared working hours.
- Your declared workplace must stay secure: sensitive data never on shared screens or in earshot of calls made from public spaces.
- Company data stays on company systems — download nothing to personal drives; plugin/personal-device limits in the IT Assets & Acceptable Use Policy (KB-E-17) apply.
- Your internet needs to support the declared availability without constant dropouts.

6. Equipment

Company-issued laptops are handed over on joining; long-term WFH employees may also request peripherals (monitor, keyboard) delivered to their registered WFH address. Hardware support at home is self-service first, filing support ticket guidelines in the IT Assets & Acceptable Use Policy (KB-E-17).

> Work-from-home is not sick leave or caregiving leave: if you are unwell or the sole carer, take the leave you are entitled to instead of claiming availability — both for your own health and your team's planning.
